A business man with 35 years of volunteer service, Mr Yip suffered poliomyelitis in his childhood and, as a result, his lower limbs became paralysed. Overcoming his physical short-coming then became his motivating force to move up the social ladder and to take active part in volunteer service to help the needy. Mr Yip set up his own business with the idea of "Helping others to help oneself". To give back to the community, he offered employment to the disabled and promoted environmental protection in his business.

In 2002, Mr Yip set up a number of non-profit organizations including PHAB Community Limited to help the physically disabled to help themselves and to spread the spirit of volunteerism for the benefit of more underprivileged groups. As the President of Hong Kong Rehabilitation Power as well as consultant and director of various non-profit organizations, Mr Yip wants to contribute to building a harmonious society. Well praised by his volunteer partners, he not only seeks self-advancement at all times but also keeps encouraging and helping other disabled persons to resume self-confidence and to integrate into the society.
